

ATA Type B Variable Growth Mutual Fund

Portfolio Manager's Comments

July 2017

With a strong start to 2012, 2 year active bond yield plunged to 9,00 after ending the year 2011 at 11,50 The magnitude of the rally accelerated especially at the second half of January thanks to raising global risk appetite and FEDs statement promising low interest rate environment until the end of 2014 Heavy inflows to emerging markets and sagging hard currencies versus all emerging currencies reinforced the decline of the interest rates We believe that the appreciation of the Turkish lira will favor a positive pass through affect on the inflation and will limit the upside potential whereas, there might be a range bound trading between 9,50 and 8,50 biased downward movement
